Grow Your Garden With

Every month, more than 44 million people use SNAP (CalFresh) to get nutritious food.

Most of us probably imagine buying items like tomatoes, squash, and apples with their benefits.

But did you know that SNAP can also help people grow their own food?

With SNAP, participants can buy seeds and edible plants. It's a great way to get fresh produce right at home!

All SNAP retailers, including Farmers' Markets, can sell seeds and plants to SNAP participants.

For every dollar spent on seeds and fertilizer, home gardeners can grow an average of $25 worth of produce, making their benefits go much further.

Apply for CalFresh:

Farmers' Markets

Farmers' Markets are physical retail marketplaces that sell produce, live plants, animal products and often prepared foods, beverages, locally produced prepackaged foods, and artisan crafts directly from farmers to consumers.

This section includes markets that feature only locally grown GMO-free products. Farmers must personally grow everything they sell at market.
